GOLF HOLIDAYS 2007-2008

GRAND NIAGARA GOLF CLUB NIAGARA FALLS, ONTARIO

The Rees Jones design for the golf course at Grand Niagara Resort is a "must play" championship course for locals and visitors alike. Rees Jones describes the course as "able to challenge PGA professionals while at the same time enjoyable for higher handicappers with tee positioning for golfers of all abilities". Rees Jones also redesigned Bethpage Black, Hazeltine, Congressional, Baltusrol, Torrey Pines, Pinehurst No. 2 and The Country Club in Brookline Massachusetts.

The Rees Jones Course at Grand Niagara Resort has been constructed with a thoughtful and strategic mix of tall fescue grasses, sparkling ponds, abundant tree-lined fairways, and open rolling terrain. With a generous number of expansive "neo-classical" bunkers framing the individual holes (a distinctive Rees Jones trademark), the course at Grand Niagara embodies the Jones philosophy of variety and playability, yet can still challenge the top players in the world from the Championship Tees.

To play a Rees Jones course is a true privilege, an experience the avid golfer will never forget. The world-renowned golf architect is famous for toughening up seven U.S. Open venues, six PGA Championship venues and three Ryder Cup sites. "We have built a golf course at the Grand Niagara Club that could host a major championship" Jones says. The course at Grand Niagara is classic Rees Jones. There is no trickery here. His fairway angles, positioning of hazards and exquisitely contoured greens demand intelligent course management, tempting players with a variety of risk-reward options.

The course captivates and challenges players of all levels. It's a gentle 5,737 yards from the forward tees, and a daunting 7,425 yards from the championship tees. Playing each of the four set of tees entails a unique challenge, entices a unique approach, engenders a unique adventure.

The beauty of Grand Niagara echoes the ambience of the world's classic courses. The fairways roll and the wisps of fescue evoke images of the mist rising from nearby Niagara Falls. One of the finest new golf courses in Canada – and even the world – the Rees Jones Course at Grand Niagara beckons you to experience golf as you've never experienced before.
