GOLF HOLIDAYS 2007-2008

SILVERTIP CANMORE, ALBERTA

Nestled in the majestic Rocky Mountains and designed by renowned golf course architect Les Furber to challenge a wide range of golfers, Silvertip may be the ultimate expression of mountain golf. With 600 feet in elevation change this is truly mountain golf and the back tees at an awesome championship 7300 yards is offset by the additional 10% ball carry you pleasantly find at an altitude of some 5000 feet.

Silvertip is on the south side of the mountain, which means hours more play time in glorious, rejuvenating sunlight and the course boasts numerous water features, including crystal-clear trout ponds which reflect the glorious scenery in the crystal clear mountain air

Awarded 4½ * by Golf Digest "Places to Play", it also has the distinction of being voted the course with the Best Scenery in Canada by Westworld magazine, and it is hardly surprising. Everywhere you look there is dramatic scenery and the opportunity to use the obligatory digital camera. Most golfers want to take some extra tee shots because they are too busy enjoying the scenery to concentrate on the golf.

The 4th hole is a modern, fearsome looking hole at 454 yards, but it's all downhill from the elevated tee. Just aim for the 150-yard marker bull's eye then try and hit the slim, narrow bentgrass green on your approach. The green target seems tiny -- it's diagonally placed making it tough to hold. Furber said: "No. 4 gives one the rewards of a long drive and a great sense of arrival. The visual alignment is stunning looking towards a legendary landmark of the Canadian Rockies -- the Three Sisters Mountains."

The Timbers Clubhouse, one of the largest wood structures built in Canada in 50 years features Mountain Wilderness Fusion-inspired cuisine, from casual to elegant. A welcome reward at the end of your day.
